Magdebourg, Nov. 24. N. S.

THE Princeſs Royal of Pruſſia arrived here the 22d Inſtant from Wolmenſtedt, having been received with great Reſpect in the ſeveral Towns in the King of Pruſſia's Dominions through which ſhe paſſed. Her Royal Highneſs was met at ſome diſtance out of Town by the Nobility and other Perſons of Quality of this Country; and as ſoon as ſhe came in ſight of this Place, was ſaluted with a Diſcharge of the Cannon of our Citadel. Her Royal Highneſs made her Entry here, attended by Lieutenant-General Fink and Monſieur Meding, and above 50 of the Nobility on Horſeback, in rich Habits, with their Servants, who were very numerous, likewiſe on Horſeback, and in fine Liveries, beſides 44 Coaches, whereof 29 were drawn by Six, and the reſt by Four Horſes each. When ſhe entred our Gates, the Cannon was again diſcharged, as it was a third time when ſhe alighted at the Royal Palace. Our Burghers, who were in Arms, and lined the Streets thro' which ſhe paſſed, and the Gariſon, which was drawn up in the great Place before the Cathedral, likewiſe gave three Vollies of their ſmall Arms. Her Royal Highneſs received the Compliments of the States of Magdebourg, the Clergy, and the Magiſtracy of this Place. Yeſterday ſhe ſaw the Cathedral and other Curioſities of this City; and this Day ſhe continued her Journey to Berlin, the ſame Honours being paid her at her Departure as had been at her Arrival here.

Berlin, Dec. 4. N. S. The 24th Inſtant the Princeſs Royal of Pruſſia continued her Journey from Magdebourg, and lay that Night at Ziegeſer, and the next Day at Brandenbourg; in both which Places, and in all the other Towns thro' which ſhe paſſed, her Royal Highneſs was received with all poſſible Demonſtrations of Joy and Reſpect. The 26th ſhe came to Spandau, whither the King of Pruſſia, the Prince Royal his Son, and the three Margraves his Brothers, were come about an Hour before ſhe arrived, who received her at her alighting out of her Coach, and conducted her to the Palace, where, after a ſhort ſtay, they took their Leave of her, and returned to Berlin. Her Royal Highneſs made her Entry into Spandau with the ſame Magnificence as ſhe had done at Magdebourg, and in other Places, being attended by the Nobility richly dreſs'd, with their Servants in fine Liveries, and a great Train of Coaches, ſome with Six, and the reſt with Four Horſes each, and being ſaluted at her Entrance by ſeveral Diſcharges of the Cannon of the Citadel. The 27th her Royal Highneſs ſet out from Spandau for this Place: She was met about half way by the King, the Prince Royal, and the Margraves; and they made their Entry here in the following manner: Firſt came Field-Marſhal-General Count Wartenſleben's Regiment of Horſe, conſiſting of three Squadrons; then 20 Led Horſes belonging to the Officers of that Regiment; a Harbinger; one of the King's Coaches with Six Horſes; 10 Coaches with Four, and 22 with Six Horſes each, belonging to the Nobility and Gentry of this Place and the Neighbourhood; 36 Coaches of the Great Officers and other Perſons of Quality at Court, 4 or 6 Footmen walking on the ſides of each of them; two Coaches of the Great Marſhal of the Court Count Wigtenſtein, with his Footmen, being 24 in Number, in very rich Liveries, walking on each ſide; two Coaches of the Field-Marſhal Count Wartenſleben, two of the Great Chamberlain Count Wartenburg, 12 of the Margraves, two of the Prince Royal, and 13 of the King's Coaches: All theſe Coaches were drawn by 6 Horſes each. Then came Margrave Chriſtian Lewis's Gentleman of the Horſe with 6 Led Horſes belonging to his Highneſs, Margrave Albert's with 8, Margrave Philip's with 6, and the Prince Royal's with 12; one of the King's Gentlemen of the Horſe; two of his Majeſty's Pages; his Led Horſes, being 30 in Number, with rich Houſings; the Grand Veneur, or Chief Huntſman, with a Gentleman, and 6 other Huntſmen; the Governor of the Pages, followed by the Pages of his Majeſty, and the Princes and Princeſſes of the Royal Family, being 32 in all; the Nobility and Gentry on Horſeback; the 4 Troops of Horſe-Guards, two Kettle-Drums, and 20 Trumpets; the Footmen to his Majeſty, the Prince Royal, and the Margraves, in Number 64; the Great Marſhal, the Marſhal of the Court, and Great Cup-bearer; the Chamberlains, the Field-Marſhal-General, the Prince Royal, followed by Lieutenant-General Fink, and the Margraves: Next came the King and the Princeſs Royal, and the Margravines, in his Majeſty's State Coach, drawn by 8 Horſes, the Great Chamberlain and the Colonel of the Swiſs Guards riding before the Coach; before and behind which, and on each ſide of it, were the Swiſs Guards on Foot: Her Royal Highneſs's Coaches followed, in which were the Ladies of her Retinue; and Monſieur Portail's Regiment of Horſe cloſed the Proceeding. The Burghers in Arms lined the Streets thro' which paſſed the Cavalcade; a Battalion of the Guards was drawn up before the Caſtle-Gate, and our Cannon was thrice diſcharged. The 28th in the Evening the Marriage Ceremonies were compleated in the Royal Chapel, Divine Service being performed by the Biſhop Urſinus. Then the Company repaired to the Great Hall, where a Noble Banquet was provided; after which there was an Entertainment of Muſick and Dancing. The next Day the Prince and Princeſs Royal received the Compliments of the Council of State, the Deputies of the States of the ſeveral Provinces, the Nobility and Clergy, and the Magiſtrates of this City; and the Days following have been chiefly ſpent in publick Entertainments, and other Diverſions.
